COMPLAINT OF A BORAN MAN

Mr. Storey, of the firm of Smith & Soary, who are engaged in the manufacture of bornx at Teal's Marsh, near Columbus, has complained to us that the new-papers in this ection have done the borax men an injury. He says that articles published in the journals hereabout have stated the supply of borax in the marshes of Esmerald; to be inexhaustible. These articles, he says, have been copied and recopied until every paper of wide circulation in the East has published and commented upon them. The natural effect has been to reduce the price of bornx greatly, the article prepared for commerce bringing at present, barely more than half the price it readily commanded last Winter before it was published to the world by the Nevada journals that the supply is inexhaustible. Mr. Storey asserts that this notion of a never ending supply of becar is incorrect, and does harm to the manufacturies of Esmeralda, inasmuch as it induces Eastern dealers to buy only what they can make a ready sale of principally to consumers for immediata use, and thus tends strongly, besides lessening the price of the article, to keep it out of the market as a commodity of freer trade and speculation. As far as this paper is concerned, we are not sure of what report it may have made on the subject, not having had leisure to look back over the file. It was our conviction, however, that the borax springs are perpetual, that is to say, so far as the vield capacity has been tested. At any rate there can be no safer and surer way of setting the matter right than in quoting the words of the State Mineralogist who has examined the borax fields and remoted concerning them to the Legislature: "The richest and most extensive deposits of the salts of borax yet discovered in any part of the world are found in the vicinity of Columbus. Columbus, Fish Lake, and Teal's Marshes alone contain twenty thousand scres of this land, which will yield an un'imited supply for an indefinite period."

Gerritt Smith, in a letter to two State Temperance Conventions, while admitting that intemperance is a giant evil, expresses grave doubts whether legislation is the way to abate it. The province of government, he has at last discovered. is the protection of person and property. Other evils must be dealt with by moral influence, instead of coercion. Summing up he says:

"I confess that I am jealous of government, and dread its tendency to invade family and individual rights. will also confess that I have great confidence in the people, and believe it to be derogatory to their dignity to be held in the leading-strings of government, and destructive to their manhood to bamper them with supptuary laws or follow them with any deg-at-the-heel laws. The people can do their own work. All that they require at the hand of government is to be protected while they are doing STREET ARABS - Perhaps no city on the American continent, for the size, says the Virginia Chronicle, contains so many men who consider that the world owes them a living without working for it as Virginia City. This class of persans are sometimes called headhams, loaters and street Arabs; for, like the Arabs of the desert, they will treat a man with hospitality, provided he pays for it has all r if himself n to give away. The habits of the Street Arab are in a great measure copied from the owl, for he is seldom seen during the day, but when the sable mantle of night settles upon the city, he sallies forth to seek his prey. As a general thing this class of roffians have not comage enough to commit highway robberies; but, to do them justice, they are heavy on rolling drunken men, till-tapping, and three-card monte."

UNDER THE HOUSE .- One great fault in building houses in both city and country is to make them too low on the ground. There should be distance enough to allow circulation of air, say three feet between the floor and carth. All rubbish, shavings, etc., should be cleaned away before siding up, and a good ventilation should be k-pt open to insure dry, sweet air, under the floors. Much sickness is caused in many fami ites from low underpining and close, damp, stagmant air, earrying miasma into the lower rooms through the floors of dwellings. Many houses are built upon that ground, and the earth thrown around the outside making a sink under the house, to hold water. This is wrong It is much better to raise the ground urder the house, and even gravel and co-ment before building. At any rate, ventilation under the house should be al-
